PLANS FINALIZED FOR CAWV ANNUAL MEETING; CONTRACTOR BALLOTS DUE

The CAWV Program Committee has finalized plans for an exciting 2018 CAWV Annual Meeting, July 12-15 at The Greenbrier. Members in attendance will hear from Dr. John Deskins Ph.D., the Director of the Bureau of Business & Economic Research at West Virginia University. Dr. Deskins will be the keynote speaker at the Saturday morning General Business Session. Also added to the annual meeting program is West Virginia Transportation Secretary and Division of Highways Commissioner Tom Smith, who will speak at Saturday's Highway/Heavy Division meeting following the General Business Session. Great networking sessions, as well as sporting events, round out this year's program. This year's meeting will be about future opportunities for CAWV members. If you have not registered, contact Cheryl Clark immediately at 304-342-1166 or email cclark@cawv.org.

New CAWV officers, directors and chairmen will take office during this year's Annual Meeting. Contractor members are asked to immediately return their ballots to the CAWV office. Ballots are due no later than July 7.

HAPPY INDEPENDENCE DAY FROM THE CAWV

In observance of Independence Day, the CAWV office will be closed Wednesday, July 4. We wish everyone a safe and happy holiday weekend.

SBA RULES OUT FOR PUBLIC COMMENT

The School Building Authority of West Virginia is accepting public comments on proposed rule changes that would reduce some of the agency's regulation of the school construction and renovation projects it funds. Tripp Dailey, CAWV Building Division Chairman is asking division members to review the policy changes and send any comments to Pat McDonald at pmcdonald@cawv.org. To view the proposed changes, go to www.sba.wv.gov and click on the "SBA Rules Out for Public Comment" link in the picture in the center of the page. The policies that have "In Progress" next to them are the ones out for current review.

Ben Ashley, the SBA's new architectural services director, said that the rule changes affect six current policies and will be online for public comment for about a month. Ashley noted that the proposals would remove sections saying the SBA assigns "the project management strategy for all projects" and "identifies" the "requirements for project design and construction administration," instead saying the county "shall work with the design professional to develop a project management strategy." Also removed would be a line saying that "if a construction manager is required, the [county] will be required to follow SBA policy regarding the procurement of professional construction management services." SBA staff must still review the contract.

The proposals would raise from $100,000 to $750,000 the amount a construction project must cost before a county has to hire a clerk of the works. The ability for the SBA to grant a waiver from this hiring would remain.

SBA Executive Director David Roach has said he was under time constraints to further the rule changes and that Win Strock, a construction management consultant and former owner of Kenhill Construction Company, "was the main cog to get it going in the right direction." Strock said of lawmakers that, "they don't want the SBA to be a regulatory agency, they want them to be a funding agency." After the public comment period, lawmakers must approve the rule changes.

"Contractors were shying away from bidding, that's the sentiment that I got, so if we can find a way to make things more user-friendly while still keeping records and accountability of those who still desire to design and build in the state high, our desire is to get as competitive as we can in everything we do," Ashley said. "If contractors are throwing more money into their proposed bid price to cover more overhead because of all the regulations they have to go through and tackle or forms they have to fill out then what kind of job are we doing?"

The proposed changes will be discussed at the CAWV Building Division Meeting at the Annual Meeting, held July 12-15 at The Greenbrier.

AWARENESS ON THE JOB

Over 80% of all workplace injury arises from worker behaviour. We make mistakes, errors in judgement or simply do not have our full attention on the job and something happens. There is also a tendency to get so focused on getting the job done that we do not recognize the obvious.

A few years ago in a local shop there was an incident where a fairly new worker fell into a hole in the floor and required several stitches in his leg. The opening was well flagged off and the whole affair seemed a mystery. The post incident interview went something like this: So, you saw the caution tape? "Yes". And you do understand what caution tape means? "Oh, yes." And you stepped over the caution tape and fell into the hole? "Yes, that is pretty much what happened." Either this guy was a complete moron or there was some other explanation.

On further questioning, it turned out that he was on the end of a tag line at the time. He was so focused on keeping the plate steady that the consequences of stepping over the caution tape did not register. At first this seemed unbelievable. However, some recent research on workplace injury confirmed that focussed concentration on a task reduces the capacity to recognize obvious hazards. And a significant number of workplace injuries result from this kind of inattention.

This applies directly to vehicle operation such as forklifts or even pickup trucks. There is a felt sense of pressure to get something done, we are driving totally wrapped up in the job and do not even see the person walking in the path of travel. Every year there are countless incidents like this.

Are there pressures and intense focus in our jobs? You bet. But it is how we deal with the pressure, how we handle the intense focus that is important. Now and again we have talked about the four second reset as a way of attuning ourselves to the hazards around us. Sometimes all it takes is a big breath when we sit behind the wheel of a vehicle. In truth, it is some conscious act of getting outside of the pressure or job focus that prevents this type of incident. How we do this is our individual preference or way of psychologically handling the job demands here.

There is an old story about a man who is riding a very fast horse. As he gallops past a bystander the person shouts, "Where are you going in such a hurry?" The man answers, "I don't know. Ask the horse." The very same situation happens with many of us at work. We get caught up in the busy day. Direct the horse once in a while and you won't ride over one of your co-workers or fall into a hole.

PROFILER CERTIFICATION CLASS JULY 10—SIGN UP WITH WVDOH

The WVDOH is partnering with the Ohio Department of Transportation for certification of profilers to be used for smoothness testing. An equipment certification event will be held July 10, 2018 (weather permitting) in Waldo, Ohio. Joseph Caudill from WVDOH Materials Control, Soils and Testing Pavement Group needs to know the name and contact information of the profiler operator and type of equipment that you will be bringing (lightweight, highspeed and model). If you have a profiler that is certified in another state, you do NOT need to participate in this event. Members can contact Joseph Caudill and provide him a copy of your certification. Please know the operator will still need to take the written exam. See the following article for a basic overview of the new smoothness specification and information on the online operator written exam. Members can obtain additional information, paperwork that must be completed, directions to the site, and a sample log form by clicking here. Contact Joseph to register by phone at (304) 558-9884 or email Joseph.D.Caudill@wv.gov.

WVDOH UPDATES PROFILER OPERATOR AND VEHICLE CERTIFICATION (PAVEMENT SMOOTHNESS TESTING)

The WVDOH has enhanced and expanded use of their pavement smoothness specifications and upgraded the testing and certification process for both operators/technicians and inertial profilers (equipment). Certification of operators can be done by visiting onlinelearning.wv.gov. Once the operator has an account established they can contact Terry Burns, (304) 558-9883, or Joseph Caudill, (304) 558-9884 at MCS&T Division, to get the test “unlocked”. Operators do not need to test until their current certification expires.

The new specification allows for reciprocity between states for profiler certification, so equipment currently certified in another state (equipment only) do not need to recertify locally. Those needing equipment certification can participate in a group equipment certification program done in cooperation with the Ohio Department of Transportation. Persons interested in learning more about equipment certification may contact Joseph Caudill or Pat Parsons at (304) 342-1166. Those needing to check on the status of WVDOH certified technicians can search the “old” and “new” Technician and Inspector Certification Directories at <https://transportation.wv.gov/highways/mcst/Pages/techcert.aspx>
